SEASIDE MOTORCOURTS RETURN TO PROMINENCE

All nine nostalgic lodgings are fully renovated for 2008

Seaside, Fla. – (April 28, 2008) – Before high-rise condos and expensive hotels dominated many of Florida's shorelines, vacationing couples stayed in comfortable cottages where they could simply relax and enjoy coastal havens like the Beaches of South Walton County.

These quaint places still exist. Seaside, Fla. celebrates the nostalgic days through preservation of vintage styles. Located on Northwest Florida's Gulf Coast, with pastel-painted cottages wrapped in white picket fences, strives to evoke those feelings of yesteryear. The tiny coastal community, with its brick streets and tin-roofed buildings, has garnered numerous architectural awards and is home to a wide variety of accommodations including grand southern homes to quaint motor court rooms.

The Seaside Motorcourt has always been quintessential to the town model. It exists almost as a small village within the 80-acre town. Favored by many of the first overnight travelers visiting Seaside, this nine room destination has been transformed this spring. With freshened courtyards, new landscaping, new exterior colors and full interior designer renovation, each room is ready for the next wave of nostalgia fans. All new surroundings welcome upon arrival, as guests are transported to earlier decades, when the thrill of just getting away to a cool little place at the beach was the desire.

All nine rooms offer a pleasing blend of colors and comforts. The rooms display rustic Americana art hung along side new plasma televisions in case you break your promise to leave the world behind for a few days. Each modest suite provides the basic amenities but every guest also may enjoy complimentary DVD rentals and full use of the Swim & Tennis and fitness club. Guests are hidden away from the main thoroughfare, but only a minutes walk from the beach or the celebrated town center. Here, guests are sure to be comfortable and entertained at the same time. The Seaside Motorcourts are a nostalgic trip to the beach in your future.
